Principles

Based on the experience of the past years.

Advantages of the incubation design

- High amount of individual coaching and support
- Clear goal setting and prioritization for incubation period
- Progress is trackable
- Process works well for finalist teams from different cities
- Flexibility for each local SIA team to add elements such as workshops
- Costs are predictable (max. X hours per finalist team)

Key success drivers of the incubation design

- Skilled and well-briefed mentors
- Tracking of team progress

Support Roles

Three support roles for your incubation progress.

Incubation
Coordinator

Coordination of entire incubation cohort*

Incubation
Mentor

Individual mentoring of a finalist venture

Incubation
Expert

Knowledge provider for specific venture dimension

*usually the SIA Country Coordinator

Focus Areas

The mentoring is structured around 3 focus areas, which have been developed with international incubation experts. These focus areas are supposed to help the venture to prioritize and structure their work. These focus areas are:

Mentoring Meetings

- ✓ The mentoring takes place in form of meetings. It is strongly recommended to hold meetings in face-to-face settings, especially at the beginning. In case of geographical distances, virtual meetings are also possible.
- ✓ Each meeting is supposed to take one hour. The meetings shall be distributed equally throughout the entire incubation period.
- ✓ The follow-up of each meeting is done by the mentee (feedback on mentor & meeting outcomes).

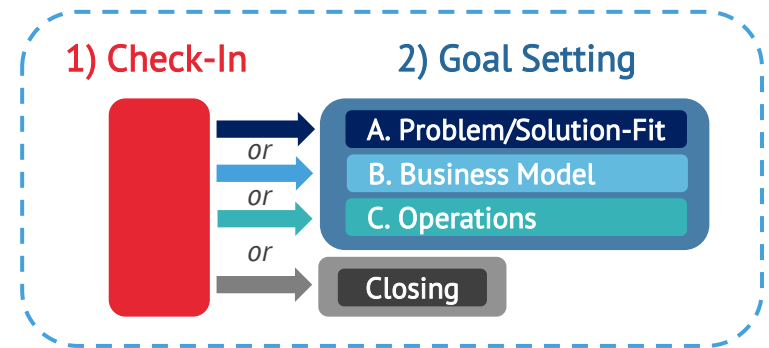

Meeting Modules

Each mentoring meeting consists of two modules:

- 1) Check-In: Here the mentor checks the progress of the specific focus area since the last meeting and decide on the next focus area.
- 1) Goal Setting: Here the mentor discusses the status of the venture regarding the respective focus area and sets goals to make progress on them.

At the very last meeting the goal setting is replaced by a closing session marking the end of the mentoring process.

COHORT

Cohort supports each other instead of competing.

Purpose

- Incubated ventures should consider each other as comrades, not as competitors
- Sharing professional and personal challenges, enhancing peer-to-peer support, and co-learning as key drivers of a sustainable leadership
- A culture of co-sharing, identity and belonging towards their cohort and SIA in general should be created

Minimum Standards

- At least two cohort gatherings per incubation phase
- At least one cohort gathering must take place in the form of a physical meeting
- At least one representative per finalist team present at each gathering
- First cohort gathering must take place within first 2 weeks of incubation
- Cohort gatherings can be integrated in incubation bootcamps, but must take place in separate sessions with a strong focus on reflecting and cohort building and must also be communicated as such towards the finalists

Wellbeing

Burn-out prevention as part of your cohort element

Burnout is common for entrepreneurs, but for social entrepreneurs, burnout rates and compassion fatigue are even higher.

Lessons learned from a SIA Alumni:

- Ali Mahlodji: one of the most successful SIA winners of all times
- Burn-out in 2014
- Video series focusing on 3 key factors for burn-out among s.e.:
 - Founders clash
 - Lack of delegation
 - Dealing with external pressure
- Embedded in a session flow to trigger a conversation among finalists
